Virtual Conference of the Greek Society for the Study of Bone Metabolism by Convin

The 27th Panhellenic Conference of the Greek Society for the Study of Bone Metabolism was successfully completed. The conference was held online, via Convin's event management digital platform, between November 6-8th 2020.

The three-day online event provided attendees the opportunity to receive important information about the recent advances for the metabolic bone diseases, from national and international keynote speakers. Among other health and allied health professionals, two related scientific associations joined the event. Together with the Hellenic Osteoporosis Foundation and the Hellenic Endocrine Society, thoroughly discussed, in round tables, special issues of particular interest for bone metabolism.

During the event, over 300 attendees received the same high-level conference experience, participating from their home and contributing to social distancing due to Covid-19 pandemic.
